DATE: 19 March 2024 (course is subject to cancelation/date change)

TIME: 0800 – 1500 JST

This training will be conducted virtually via Adobe Connect.

*This training was originally scheduled for 13 Feb 2024; those who have signed up for the 13 Feb training do not need to sign-up again.***

DESCRIPTION:

A leader's success is highly depended upon his/her ability to critically evaluate data and make effective decisions. This seminar focuses on the process of critical analysis and problem solving. The primary objectives of this seminar are to impart a functional ability to reason well and to improve the participant's analytical skills and instincts. In addition to familiarizing the participant with advanced methods of critical thinking, the course is further designed to aid the participant in understanding the core principles involved in the practice of decision-making.

OUTCOME:

- Identify and understand basic formal and informal fallacies of language and thought.
- Understanding the logical structures of the primary classes of arguments used in the organizational contexts.
- Identify the components of arguments and demonstrate the ability to create complex argument structures in verbal and written forms.
- Utilize the various problem-solving models to resolve organizational issues.
